A: For now, the only way to do this is to run Jupyter as a docker container and run the webbrowser there. These days the latest versions of Jupyter support notebooks that can be stored as docker image, so that's what you'd want to use, just make sure you use the right docker images for the right kernels and pre-defined packages. Friday, February 23, 2017 THE LITTLE TRAITOR "The little traitor, the cat with the yellow eyes, had stolen the sugar; he was running to hide among the flowers..." When I first heard these words in "The Witch in the Well", a play by Astrid Lindgren, I was ten years old and I loved it. I didn't love reading the book, because there's not much to read in a play, but I loved this short story and the picture of the actress. I always wanted to try to act, but the confidence came when I was at school. I was struggling with my language, since I've lived in an immigrant family since I was three and I found it hard to communicate with my classmates. It was with the encouragement of my mother that I started writing stories, and it helped a lot. In reality, when I read the book, the story happened at my house with my mother, my brother and me. I would usually eat dinner at seven and we would all sit in the living room and read aloud from the books we had at home. My mother's stories were always around children and they had children. That's the story, the lines, the characters that I've always seen in my eyes. My grandmother was a writer and I've often felt like I was born in my maternal grandmother's home. We share the same house, the same books and the same story. I don't know how to explain this, I think I'm the only one to feel this way and I think that's why I tried to write from the very beginning. I'm curious to see if I can do it, write a novel. Maybe I've had a natural talent all this time, without realizing it. But I know that I'm very lazy, and that I have a great problem keeping my patience to finish anything... I have to start somewhere, at least. "To create a novel, you need the smell of a drug," Andrés Sánchez, 82157476af
